Description

A small, steel Bow Corkscrew made for travel.

The ring of the Bow is cut to the outside edges to give a faceted pattern. This echoed to the worm with is more robust in size and has an outer edge. The worm is hinged to fold into the bow to both protect it and reduce the size of the corkscrew when not in use.

This Bow Corkscrew is little different to most that you see and is tactile and useable. Late 19th Century.

The fully open size is given.
